

sisted on his refusing the crown, in which his son, for the first time, presumed to disobey him, and could not be brought to accept of any other title, than that of The Most Faithful of his Subjects.

MORAL.

Fear God. Honour the King.

FRIEND.

FRIENDSHIP.

AN ALLEGORY.

A World, in purchase of a Friend, is Gain.

Dr. YOUNG.

A RICH merchant had an only son, whom he most tenderly loved; he was educated with the utmost care, and nothing was neglected to render him perfectly accomplished. The education of this youth being nearly finished, he formed a resolution to travel. "My son, said his father to him, one day, consider, that amongst all the wants

N. 3.

of